Restore Balance

GOERING
CENTER | for Family & Private Business

When you are leading a family or private business, the pressures and concerns that you shoulder are heavy, and so much is riding on how well you manage that load. Your work life impacts your home life, and your home life impacts your work life, too. All of it affects your health—your physical well being, and the health of your company's bottom line. Our Roundtables provide a forum for collaborative peer sharing about strategic and tactical business issues, within the larger context of your personal and family concerns. Consider this your very own board of advisors, whose number-one goal is to help you restore balance.

"Being a part of the Goering Center Roundtables has provided me the opportunity to share with my peers the different business challenges I'm facing. It's nice to have that confidential and transparent setting where I can learn and receive coaching from experienced professionals that understand what I'm going through. This has built a confidence in me and allows me to look at growing my business through a different lens."

WHO SHOULD PARTICIPATE AND WHY?

Goering Center Roundtables are created for business owners and executives who seek balance across their work and family lives.

Successful candidates are "evergreen"—always growing and open to learning from others. Members also want others to benefit from their personal and professional experiences, and they are willing and able to share their insights.

The Goering Center is a valued partner delivering knowledge, connection and community.

WHAT SHOULD YOU EXPECT AT A MEETING?

Meetings are held monthly, often at a group member's business. Each Roundtable prioritizes issues to be discussed and develops its own meeting agenda. Some Roundtables are convened to address family business or succession issues. Others focus on challenges affecting every business like growing sales, managing growth, culture building, surfacing and developing top talent, pricing strategies, as well as structuring compensation and benefit packages.
